Dear Hiring Team,

I'm applying for the Product Marketing Manager role because I've spent the last few years building products that drive retention and engagement through behavioral psychology and gamification—and now I want to learn how high-growth tech companies do it at scale with proper resources and team collaboration.

Why I'm the right fit:

I've built three production platforms from 0 → 1 that demonstrate exactly what this role requires: understanding user psychology, creating retention mechanics, executing go-to-market strategies, and shipping products that people actually use.

Melbourne Cup Sweep Manager - Live SaaS platform serving 6,900+ Australian venues: Built complete platform (Next.js, TypeScript, Supabase, Stripe) solving operational chaos; achieved #1 Google ranking through strategic SEO; executing 50 venue calls daily targeting $500k ARR.

Doomsday NFT - Designed retention system where player psychology drove engagement: Created multi-layered mechanics generating three distinct player archetypes; built FOMO-driven economics; repositioned from "NFT project" to "on-chain survival game"; sourced 38,000-city database for personalization; implemented 0.01 ETH hit rewards.

LinkedIn Executive Dashboard (X-Team) - Built production platform saving $5k/year via Claude Vision API workaround; designed AI-powered content generation (11 departments); achieved 98.67% test coverage, 352 passing tests, B+ security; created 15 Slack commands.

What I bring:

Customer empathy + technical fluency: I identify problems through firsthand experience and ship production code (Next.js, TypeScript, React, Node.js, PostgreSQL, Stripe, AI APIs) enabling genuine collaboration with engineering teams. Retention expertise: Every product focuses on habit-forming behavior through psychology, economics, and game mechanics. Go-to-market execution: Achieved #1 Google ranking, repositioned products for differentiation, executing 50 sales calls daily. High-velocity shipping: Built three production platforms while running Your Mate Agency (5 clients, 100% retention).

Why this role:

I've proven I can identify opportunities, build products, and acquire customers. What I haven't done is work inside a well-funded, scaling tech company with proper data infrastructure, cross-functional collaboration, and resources to do retention at scale. I want to learn from design, engineering, data, and marketing teams who are better at their craft than I am—and work on something in sports and entertainment which genuinely excites me.

Why I'll succeed:

You're looking for someone who can "move fast, experiment often, and double down on what works." That's my operating model. I don't wait for perfect—I ship, test, learn, iterate. I understand player psychology because I've designed systems where economics, game mechanics, and social proof align to drive engagement. Most importantly: I own outcomes. When I build something, it's my money, my reputation, my risk. That creates accountability and resourcefulness you can't teach.

I'd love to discuss how my experience building engagement systems and executing go-to-market strategies can contribute to your client's growth.

Cheers,
Matt
